IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

CLINTON REILLY,

No. C 06-04332 SI

Plaintiff,

ORDER RE: MOTION TO INTERVENE AND UNSEAL DOCUMENTS

v.

MEDIANEWS GROUP INC,

Defendant.

Media Alliance and the San Francisco Bay Guardian have moved to intervene in this action and unseal all documents filed in this case. Hearing on the motion is currently scheduled for January 26, 2007. Pursuant to Civil Local Rule 7-1(b), the Court determines that the motion is appropriate for resolution without oral argument, and VACATES the hearing. As set forth below, the Court GRANTS IN PART the motion to intervene and unseal records.

BACKGROUND

Media Alliance and the San Francisco Bay Guardian (“intervenors”) have moved to intervene in this action for the limited purpose of requesting that the Court unseal and make public all documents filed in this case. In response to intervenors’ motion, defendants have agreed to unseal most of the documents previously filed under seal, but have identified nineteen documents or portions of documents that they wish to remain under seal.¹

¹Defendants MediaNews Group, Inc. (“MNG”) and California Newspapers Partnership (“CNP”) filed the principal response to intervenors’ motion. Defendants Gannett Co., Inc. and Stephens Group, Inc., have joined in that response. Defendant Hearst has filed a response “tak[ing] no position regarding the specific documents that the MNG/CNP Response seeks to remain sealed.” Plaintiff has not filed any

1 The underlying antitrust case concerns the ownership and control of daily newspapers in the 2 greater San Francisco Bay Area, currently defined by the parties as encompassing San Francisco, 3 Alameda, Contra Costa, Marin, San Mateo, Santa Clara, and Solano counties. By this action, plaintiff 4 Clinton Reilly seeks to block and undo a series of transactions through which, he claims, the past and 5 present owners of the major Bay Area newspapers have begun to consolidate ownership of those 6 newspapers, to divide up the geographic markets, and ultimately to forego competing with each other.

7 The documents at issue on this motion were filed by the parties in connection with two requests 8 for a temporary restraining order brought by plaintiff. Most, if not all, of the documents were filed 9 under seal because they had been designated as “confidential” by one of the parties during the discovery 10 process, pursuant to the parties’ stipulated protective order. As mentioned, the defendants have now 11 narrowed the number of records that they wish to keep under seal to nineteen, which they have lettered 12 “a” through “s.”

14 LEGAL STANDARD

15 The Ninth Circuit, in Kamakana v. City and County of Honolulu, 447 F.3d 1172 (9th Cir. 2006), 16 recently gave a thorough overview of the public’s right of access to judicial records. The court began 17 by noting: “Historically, courts have recognized a ‘general right to inspect and copy public records and 18 documents, including judicial records and documents.’” Id. at 1178 (quoting Nixon v. Warner 19 Comm’ns., Inc., 435 U.S. 589, 597 & n.7 (1978)). “This right is justified by the interest of citizens in 20 ‘keeping a watchful eye on the workings of public agencies.’ Such vigilance is aided by the efforts of 21 newspapers to ‘publish information concerning the operation of government.’” Id. (quoting Nixon, 435 22 U.S. at 598).

23 In general, court records may only be sealed for “compelling reasons.” As the Ninth Circuit 24 stated in Kamakana:

25 [A] “strong presumption in favor of access” is the starting point. A party seeking to seal 26 a judicial record then bears the burden of overcoming this strong presumption by 27 meeting the “compelling reasons” standard. That is, the party must “articulate[] 28 compelling reasons supported by specific factual findings,” that outweigh the general response to intervenors’ motion.

1 history of access and the public policies favoring disclosure, such as the “public interest
2 in understanding the judicial process.” In turn, the court must “conscientiously 3 balance[] the competing interests” of the public and the party who seeks to keep certain 4 judicial records secret. After considering these interests, if the court decides to seal 5 certain judicial records, it must “base its decision on a compelling reason and articulate 6 the factual basis for its ruling, without relying on hypothesis or conjecture.”

7 Id. at 1178-79 (citations omitted).

8 The Ninth Circuit, however, has also identified two exceptions to the “compelling reasons” 9 standard. First, there are certain documents that have “traditionally been kept secret for important policy 10 reasons.” Times Mirror Co. v. United States, 873 F.2d 1210, 1219 (9th Cir. 1989). The Ninth Circuit 11 “has identified two categories of documents that fall in this category: grand jury transcripts and warrant 12 materials in the midst of a pre-indictment investigation.” Kamakana, 447 F.3d at 1178.

13 The second exception to the “compelling reasons” standard is more relevant to this motion. The 14 Ninth Circuit stated:

15 We have, however, carved out an exception to the presumption of access to judicial 16 records, for a sealed discovery document attached to a non-dispositive motion, such that 17 the usual presumption of the public's right of access is rebutted. There are, as we 18 explained in Foltz, “good reasons to distinguish between dispositive and nondispositive 19 motions.” 331 F.3d at 1135. Specifically, the public has less of a need for access to 20 court records attached only to non-dispositive motions because those documents are 21 often unrelated, or only tangentially related, to the underlying cause of action.

22 The public policies that support the right of access to dispositive motions, and related 23 materials, do not apply with equal force to non-dispositive materials. . . . Thus a 24 “particularized showing,” under the “good cause” standard of Rule 26(c) will suffice to 25 warrant preserving the secrecy of sealed discovery material attached to nondispositive 26 motions.

27 In sum, we treat judicial records attached to dispositive motions differently from records 28 attached to non-dispositive motions. Those who seek to maintain the secrecy of documents attached to dispositive motions must meet the high threshold of showing that “compelling reasons” support secrecy. A “good cause” showing under Rule 26(c) will suffice to keep sealed records attached to nondispositive motions.

29 Id. at 1180-81 (citations omitted).

30 Civil Local Rule 79-5 establishes the procedures by which a document may be filed “under seal” 31 in the Northern District. The Rule states, in pertinent part:

32 (a) A sealing order may issue only upon a request that establishes that the 33 document, or portions thereof, is privileged or protectable as a trade secret or otherwise 34 entitled to protection under the law, (hereinafter referred to as “sealable.”) The request 35 must be narrowly tailored to seek sealing only of sealable material, and must conform 36 with Civil L.R. 79-5(b) or (c). A stipulation, or a blanket protective order that allows a 37 party to designate documents as sealable, will not suffice to allow the filing of 38

1 documents under seal.

3 (d) Filing a Document Designated Confidential by Another Party. If a party wishes to 4 file a document that has been designated confidential by another party pursuant to a 5 protective order, or if a party wishes to refer in a memorandum or other filing to 6 information so designated by another party, the submitting party must file and serve an 7 Administrative Motion for a sealing order and lodge the document, memorandum or 8 other filing in accordance with this rule. . . . Within five days thereafter, the designating 9 party must file with the Court and serve a declaration establishing that the designated 10 information is sealable, and must lodge and serve a narrowly tailored proposed sealing 11 order, or must withdraw the designation of confidentiality. If the designating party does 12 not file its responsive declaration as required by this subsection, the document or 13 proposed filing will be made part of the public record.

10 (f) Effect of Seal. Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, any document filed under seal 11 shall be kept from public inspection, including inspection by attorneys and parties to the 12 action, during the pendency of the case. . . .

12 Civ. L.R. 79-5.

13
14 DISCUSSION

15 I. Motion to intervene

16 Defendants do not oppose intervention for the limited purpose of challenging the sealing of 17 documents filed to date. Defendants express concern, however, with the intervenors’ continued role in 18 this case. “To the extent the Court contemplates a continuing role for proposed intervenors in this 19 litigation, MediaNews and CNP request that the Court be mindful of, and attempt to avoid, the delay 20 and distraction likely to be caused by extensive litigation of sealing issues, particularly given the 21 expedited schedule adopted in this matter.” Opp. at 2:18-21. In reply to defendants’ concerns, 22 intervenors request that the Court allow them to remain as intervenors for the “purpose of being party 23 to any future requests for sealing orders.” Reply at 2:6-7. Allowing them continuing status as 24 intervenors, they argue, will be more efficient than forcing them to newly move for intervention each 25 time they wish to challenge the sealing of a document. The Court agrees with intervenors. Many more 26 documents are likely to be filed under seal in this case, and intervenors will likely seek access to those 27 documents that appear improperly sealed. The parties and the Court will therefore be far less burdened 28 if intervenors do not have to move for intervention each time a document is filed under seal. The Court

1 is not unmindful of defendants' concern with protracted and distracting disputes over the sealing of 2 documents. The best way to avoid such disputes, however, is for the parties to closely adhere to the 3 procedures of the Local Rules and the standards set out in Kamakana, as discussed above, when they 4 seek to seal a document.

6 II. Motion to unseal

7 A. Procedural defects of the underlying motions to seal

8 Intervenor's first argument is that all of the records must be unsealed because the parties did not follow 9 the proper procedures, as outlined in Local Rules 79-5(d), for sealing documents designated as 10 confidential by the opposing party. Most of the records here at issue were produced during discovery 11 and labeled "confidential" under the parties' stipulated protective order. In connection with the various 12 motions the Court has heard to this point, the parties have filed many of these "confidential" documents 13 that were produced by the opposing party. As discussed above, Local Rule 79-5(d) requires the party 14 that designates a document as confidential to file, within five days of the document being lodged with 15 the Court, a declaration establishing that the document is sealable. If the designating party fails to do 16 so, the document is filed unsealed. Civ. L.R. 79-5(d).

17 Intervenor's second argument is that the parties did not follow the strictures of Rule 79-5(d) in filing many 18 of the documents at issue here; the "designating party" did not file a declaration within five days of the 19 documents being lodged. Nonetheless, the Court granted the parties' motions to file the documents 20 under seal. The parties' failure to follow the proper procedures is therefore a moot point. The purpose 21 of requiring the designating party to file a declaration in support of sealing is to help the Court determine 22 whether the document at issue merits being filed under seal. That is also the determination the Court 23 must make on this motion.

24
25 B. Good cause to seal

26 The parties dispute what standard the Court should use in determining whether the records at 27 issue should remain sealed. Intervenor's argument is that, rather than the standards outlined by the Ninth 28 Circuit in Kamakana, the Court must apply the standards outlined in Local Rule 79-5. As discussed,

1 Rule 79-5(a) states that a record is only sealable if it is “privileged or protectable as a trade secret or 2 otherwise entitled to protection under the law.” Intervenors suggest that “entitled to protection under 3 the law,” requires the parties to show more than what is required under the Kamakana framework. The 4 Court disagrees. Kamakana establishes how a party shows that a document is “entitled to protection 5 under the law.” Rule 79-5(a) requires no more, and no less.

6 The records at issue here were filed in connection with non-dispositive motions. As discussed, 7 under Kamakana, “a ‘particularized showing,’ under the ‘good cause’ standard of Rule 26(c) will suffice 8 to warrant preserving the secrecy of sealed discovery material attached to nondispositive motions.” 447 9 F.3d at 1180. The Court therefore must examine each disputed record to determine if defendants have 10 made a “particularized showing” of “good cause” to warrant maintaining the records under seal, or to 11 warrant protection under Rule 26(c). Under Rule 26(c):

12 For good cause to exist, the party seeking protection bears the burden of showing 13 specific prejudice or harm will result if no protective order is granted. . . . “[B]road 14 allegations of harm, unsubstantiated by specific examples or articulated reasoning, do 15 not satisfy the Rule 26(c) test” []. If a court finds particularized harm will result from disclosure of information to the public, then it balances the public and private interests to decide whether a protective order is necessary.

16 Phillips v. General Motors Corp., 307 F.3d 1206, 1211 (9th Cir. 2002) (citations omitted). The district 17 courts have “broad latitude” under Rule 26(c) “to prevent disclosure of materials for many types of 18 information, including, but not limited to, trade secrets or other confidential research, development, or 19 commercial information.” Id. The Supreme Court has interpreted Rule 26(c) as conferring “broad 20 discretion on the trial court to decide when a protective order is appropriate and what degree of 21 protection is required.” Seattle Times Co. v. Rhinehart, 467 U.S. 20, 36 (1984).

22 Having examined each of the nineteen records or record excerpts at issue, the Court determines 23 that defendants have established good cause to maintain the seal on all but two. The bulk of the records 24 contain detailed financial information, including past and present revenues, and projections of future 25 revenues. The financial information relates not only to the Bay Area newspapers at issue in this case, 26 but also to newspapers and other financial interests around the country. The Declaration of Joseph J.
27 Lodovic provides an explanation, for each record, of how such information, if unsealed, would 28 potentially cause harm to the defendants, and others. See Lodovic Decl. ¶ 11. In particular, Lodovic

1 explains that the revenue information and projections might allow competitors to anticipate and react 2 to actions taken by defendants in the future. See Lodovic Decl. ¶¶ 7, 11. Such information might also 3 help the bargaining position of companies that negotiate with defendants in the future. Furthermore, 4 the future projection information might expose defendants to liability to investors who rely on such 5 projections, and might force defendants to make further disclosures to satisfy the reporting requirements 6 of the SEC. See Oppo. at 10:15-25; Lodovic Decl. ¶ 10. After examining each record in dispute, and 7 each explanation by Mr. Lodovic, the Court finds that defendants' concerns constitute "good cause" for 8 maintaining the bulk of the records under seal.²

9 The Court does, however, find two exceptions to its finding of "good cause." First, with respect
10 to record "a," defendants request that the entire paragraph beginning "Because of Hearst's . . .," on page 11 HEARST000320 of Exhibit 2 to the Shulman Declaration, remain under seal. The Court finds that the 12 concerns discussed above justify keeping the second sentence of that paragraph under seal. The 13 remainder of the paragraph, however, does not contain the sensitive financial information that 14 defendants express concern with. The Court therefore ORDERS that all but the second sentence of the 15 paragraph be unsealed.

16 Second, with respect to record "f," defendants request that "10 pages beginning with page 17 marked 3 and through page marked 6, and page 8," remain under seal, because:

18 [t]his exhibit contains balance sheets for MediaNews properties segmented by 19 geographic region and a statement of operations that contains recent figures for 20 advertising and circulation revenue and itemized expenses. This information would be 21 of particular value to competitors as it is segmented by geographic region and by revenue 22 source, and competitors . . . could use it to target specific revenue streams of specific 23 MediaNews properties.

22 Lodovic Decl. ¶ 11(f). The Court agrees with defendants' assessment with respect to seven of the ten 23 pages identified. However, the pages marked 4, 5, and 6, do not contain "balance sheets" or "recent 24 figures for advertising and circulation and itemized expenses." The concerns cited by defendants 25 therefore do not apply to these pages. The Court ORDERS the pages marked 4, 5 and 6, in Exhibit 21 26 of the Supplemental Shulman Declaration, and Exhibit 1 of the Asher Declaration, unsealed.

27 ²Moreover, none of the nineteen records in dispute have been relevant to the Court's findings
28 in the underlying case, to this point. The "public interest in understanding the judicial process," Kamakana, 447 F.3d at 1179, is therefore of little to no weight in the face of defendants' concerns.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons and for good cause shown, the Court hereby GRANTS IN PART the motion to intervene and to unseal records filed by Media Alliance and the San Francisco Bay Guardian. (Docket No. 114). With the two exceptions discussed above, records “a” through “s,” as described by defendants, shall remain under seal. The party that originally filed each document to be unsealed shall re-file those documents in accordance with this order.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
